To the north is the Gulf of Venezuela and to the west is the Caribbean Sea. The archipelago is composed by three islands, the largest is called Consejo, where is located the main settlement, and an important reserve of sea turtles, whose population is constantly increasing in relation to climate change. It also has several coves and beaches, the largest of which are known as the beaches of Maracaibo. Geography Consejo Island Consejo Island (Spanish: Isla de Consejo) is the largest island in the Archipiélago Los Monjes and the largest one in the Gulf of Venezuela. It is located in front of the Gritos Islet, named for the thunder it makes. The island of Consejo is the only island in the Archipiélago Los Monjes that is inhabited. It is an uninhabited paradise island with a forest and the largest population of sea turtles in Venezuela. In the forest of the island, which is located in the center of the island, is the residence of the Captain, who is the only man in the world who studies the marine ecology of the area. He has said that the sea turtle population of Consejo is greater than that of any other part of the country. At the forest of Consejo it is possible to see the sea turtle nests. Isla de Consejo has more than 30 kilometres (19.3 miles) of coastline and is surrounded by shallow waters. It is located in front of the new high-rise building of the José Antonio Maravall General Hospital.

In the south of the island, there is the locality of El Chupalo, which belongs to the community of "Cabay," where there is a community museum of the island. Consejo Island has an area of 2,936 hectares (7,213 acres). San Juan Island San Juan Island (Spanish: Isla San Juan) is the smallest of the archipelago and the most isolated, located to the west of the Archipiélago Los Monjes, between the Chubut reef and the Caribbean Sea. It is an uninhabited island with forest, and the most natural territory for nesting the sea turtle. The island is in front of the "Las Lajas" islet, named for the beach in front of it. On the island is the cemetery of "C 82157476af
